Erhardt-Perkins offensive system. The Patriots run a modified "Ron Erhardt-Ray Perkins" offensive system first installed by Charlie Weis under Bill Belichick. Both Ron Erhardt and Ray Perkins served as offensive assistant coaches under the defensive-minded Chuck Fairbanks while he was head coach of the Patriots in the 1970s. This system is noted for its multiple formation and personnel grouping ...

Aaron Brown was a two-way player at Pepperdine, standing out both as an outfielder as well as a pitcher. The Phillies' 3rd round draft selection in 2014 was slated to play exclusively on the offensive side after signing that year. But, after reaching the Double-A level as an offensive player and seeing his batting average come in under .225, he was switched back to the pitching role in 2017.
