The average 70 kg (150 lb) adult human body contains approximately  $7 \times 10^{27}$  atoms and contains at least detectable traces of 60 chemical elements. About 29 of these elements are thought to play an active positive role in life and health in humans. The relative amounts of each element vary by individual, mainly due to differences in the proportion of fat, muscle and bone in their body.

Periodic tables typically color-code parts of the table to group chemically similar elements together. There is some variation in this. "Metals" is really the largest category, which here combines the Transition Metals of the d-block with other metals of the p-block. Sometimes these are distinguished.
