Badfinger were a British rock band that, in their most successful lineup, consisted of Pete Ham, Mike Gibbins, Tom Evans, and Joey Molland. The band evolved from an earlier group called The Iveys that was formed in 1961 by Ham, Ron Griffiths and David "Dai" Jenkins in Swansea, Wales.

Badfinger - Wikipedia

Often unfairly dismissed as mere Beatles imitators, a reputation not helped by their association with Paul McCartney, George Harrison and the Apple label, Badfinger created some of the most sublime melodies of the early '70s. The band's legacy may be mired in tragedy, with songwriters Pete Ham and Tom Evans both taking their own lives (in ...

"BABY BLUE"/ BADFINGER: THE AMAZING SAGA OF A BAND. Badfinger was a Beatles-produced band in the early 70' who had 4 albums and 4 top hit singles on the Beatles' label, Apple Records. Amazingly, one of my favorite songs by them "Baby Blue" had a resurgence in 2013, as it was chosen for the final episode of the popular Breaking Bad TV show,...

Badfinger: Live: Day After Day - PopMatters

Badfinger's first hit was Paul McCartney's "Come and Get It." If there ever was a rock n roll cautionary tale, it is this song. The lyrics now sadly serve as the epitaph for the band's two creative forces Pete Ham and Tom Evans, both of whom thought killing themselves was the only way to escape the misery caused by the indentured servitude they endured due to a particularly cruel ...

Molland managed to entice and then alienate fans in the '90s with the release of a live Badfinger album from tapes dating from the early '70s -- on which the drums and other instruments had very obviously been re-dubbed. Various radio performances and concert recordings later surfaced, along with the documentary film Badfinger (1997), which recounts much of their story.
