Full Text Of I Remember

The poem is a Petrarchan sonnet with an unusual rhyme scheme in the sestet—the final six lines. These lines follow a CDDECE rhyme scheme, the purpose of which is to create a four-line separation between the two C-rhyme lines. This separation imitates the experience of forgetting someone and then remembering them again after a period of time.

Joe Brainard: "I Remember" - I remember the first time I met Frank O'Hara. He was walking down Second Avenue. It was a cool early Spring evening but he was wearing only a white shirt with the sleeves rolled up to his elbows. And blue jeans. And moccasins. I remember that he seemed very sissy to me. Very theatrical. Decadent. I remember that I liked him instantly.

I remember the cry of an owl in the night and I knew it was an ominous warning, a cry of death. I remember running in the dust behind the medicine truck when it came to the reservation, lifesavers was a free treat. And grandpa sitting in his favorite resting chair under his favorite shade tree with his dog "Oly" by his side.
