At one point they were relatively common in the fledgling Space Marine Legions, but by the time of the Horus Heresy were a rarity and had been replaced by the more flexible and easy to manufacture bolter. The loss of Forge Worlds during The Horus Heresy sped the decline of Volkite weapons in the Imperium.

Yes, there are still some issues, but in my mind, the single biggest thing that broke 7th ed was all the detachments and wonkiness that resulted. With the release of the new Red Rulebook for the Horus Heresy, they have also eliminated the whole invisibility issue and clarified more than a few other rules. The Horus Heresy is not about the armies.

Weapons that employ ancient Graviton technology, selectively altering gravity to turn the target's mass against them. Grav weapons were used by many of the Space Marine Legions during the Horus Heresy. However, in the 41st millennium, the secrets of how to build and maintain them are locked deep within the vaults of the Adeptus Mechanicus on Mars and are even rarer than plasma guns, and like ...

The Horus Heresy is one of the single biggest clusterfuck of events in Warhammer 40,000 fluff, alongside the Eldar's creation of a new Chaos God, and the rampage and fall of the star gods. Needless to say, this heresy derailed the Emperor's plan and himself, and gave the Chaos Gods their most prominent armies to carry out their will in realspace.
