Impaired Swallowing: Abnormal functioning of the swallowing mechanism associated with deficits in oral, pharyngeal, or esophageal structure or function. Impaired swallowing involves more time and effort to transfer food or liquid from the mouth to the stomach. It occurs when the muscles and nerves that help move food through the throat and esophagus are not working right.

Skin care involves keen observation of any breaks in the skin or other abnormalities that might indicate injury or disease. Keeping the skin moist but not wet, dry in the axilla (armpits) and perineum, and free from pressure are very important steps to protect the resident. Be sparing with lotions or other emollients for keeping skin supple.
