Cause and Effect In a cause-and-effect relationship, one condition or event makes another one happen. Authors are not the only ones to use cause and effect. In fact, you use this relationship every day. Every time you say the word because, you are recognizing why something happened. This is its cause. The effect is what happened as a result of the cause.

Anne is working at her desk. While she is directly aware only of her immediate situation — her being seated in front of her computer, the music playing in the background, the sound of her husband's voice on the phone in the next room, and so on — she is quite certain that this situation is only part of a series of increasingly more inclusive, albeit less immediate, situations: the ...
