The picture superiority effect refers to the phenomenon in which pictures and images are more likely to be remembered than words. This effect has been demonstrated in numerous experiments using different methods. It is based on the notion that "human memory is extremely sensitive to the symbolic modality of presentation of event information". Explanations for the picture superiority effect are ...

Chart 3 is an example of a simple bar chart. Bar charts are similar to column charts and are used to present similar types of information but the data is presented in the form of horizontal bars rather than vertical columns, so the years are still the independent variables and therefore are still represented on the x-axis but this is now shown on the vertical axis rather than the horizontal axis.
