The House of Hunger (1978) is a short story collection that was the first book by Zimbabwean writer Dambudzo Marechera (1952–1987), published three years after he left university. Sometimes subtitled Short Stories, this work is actually a collection of one novella of 80-odd pages ("House of Hunger") and nine satellite short stories.

The House of Hunger - Wikipedia

House of Hunger—both the novella and the loosely linked stories that accompanied it when it came out in book form—is a prescient critique of militarized and masculinist authoritarianism. As Marechera saw back in the 1970s, the way in which one resists will be the way in which one is governed.

I got my things and left. This, the opening line to Dambudzo Marechera's The House of Hunger, apart from being the coolest opening line in African fiction, is a fair summary of the writer's life. He was always getting his things and leaving; not that he had many things to get—in his last years, homeless and reduced to sleeping on park benches in Harare, Zimbabwe, all he had were his ...

The House of Hunger is painful to read, painful to ponder, and I found it brought my own experience of childhood homelessness to the front of my mind. In this book, Dambudzo stood in his experience, acted out his life in it, and foists it upon the reader. It's a tour-de-force of the author's indelible trauma and subsequent mental illness.
